Incredible wildlife, harrowing brushes with danger, spectacular scenery, fabulous fishing, and the rigours of camping with small children are highlighted in adventures drawn from more than a dozen years of exploring Ontario's northwestern wilderness.

hellip;a beautifully put together bookhellip; (Thunder Bay Chronicle-Journal)It's been more than 50 years since Ely, Minn.-based writer and game-changing conservationist Sigurd Olson's The Singing Wilderness popularized wilderness tripping by evocatively describing the simple charms of canoe-camping in the Boundary Waters. In the same vein, Blazino makes the Quetico wilderness accessible to readers?creating enthusiasm and making a passionate, first-hand argument for the restorative powers of nature. I feel really fortunate to spend my summers in the lake country of Northern Ontario - it is a place like none other. The stories and photos really capture the beauty and wonder of this region. Anyone who appreciates the outdoors will love reading this book. (Eric Staal Olympic gold-medal winner and Stanley Cup champion)A great read. To me it's more than a collection of chapters about Canoe Country, it's a collection of thoughtful impressions or feelings about the place that are all interwoven and create one storybook. It creates enthusiasm for the park - and that I really like. (Kevin Callan author of The Happy Camper and Dazed but Not Confused)

About the Author Darryl Blazino has explored, camped, and fished on hundreds of lakes over the past two decades and spends nearly 50 days a year pursuing his love of the outdoors.
