Octogenarian author, SIDNEY EDEN, has acted with, directed, and, as a producer, presented some of the biggest stars in stage, film and television. He created a class called ACTING FOR NON-ACTORS, in NYC in 1982 and the title has been swiped throughout the world. But no book has ever been written with such a title, though there is an existing platform for such a name on line. The book, through means of a romantic fable told in six chapters and involving a Left-wing sage of the theatre and beautiful go-getter from Orange County who is a fan admirer of Ronald Reagan. The action (lessons) take place in Gramercy Park (proper) and in The Players, across the street, in Edwin Booth's landmark home. There is long pronunciation guide at the rear of the book and an index.
