Delightful, I highly recommendBy CustomerI had never heard of a Rhea (large, longlived, flightless, bird) before stumbling upon this terrific little book. It made me smile the whole way through. The photos are well done and really capture the personality of Amica (the name of the bird). It is appropriate for adults as well as children. It is also published here in the US and is of very good quality. Really, I just love it.

Amica is a rhea—a flightless bird in the ratite family, related to ostriches, emus, and kiwis. Amica was adopted as a young chick and in turn quickly adopted mother and son Meadow and Washo Shadowhawk as his flock and made himself at home in their living room. Now an adult, Amica stands nearly six feet tall, and has a six-foot wingspan. By day he roams the backyard, exploring, running, and building nests, along with his friends the chickens and the dog. At night, he watches television and sleeps in the living room with his friend the cat. What's it like living with a rhea? As you'll discover in the words and photos in this book, it is never boring, and requires massive sacrifices. Rheas, which are typically hunted or raised as livestock, are highly intelligent and expressive, with a humanlike range of emotions. Amica's extraordinary story shows the powerful and surprising connections that can be forged between humans and animals.

"As you read this book and study the photographs you will gradually fall in love. For Amica is truly loveable. More than that, she is extremely intelligent and a great source of entertainment. You are in for a treat!" —Dr. Jane Goodall, from the foreword "The Shadowhawks' unlikely friendship with a bird is as delightful as they come. Get to know Amica and you'll fall in love, too!" —Jennifer S. Holland, bestselling author of Unlikely Friendships, Unlikely Loves, and Unlikely Heroes "This is a story of true love! It reminds us all how very lucky we are to share the world with creatures as beautiful as Amica—and with people as wise, observant, and loving as Washo and Meadow Shadowhawk." —T. A. Barron, author of the Merlin Saga "Amica will warm your heart and soul and show you just how much we can learn from other animals." —Marc Bekoff, author of Rewilding our Hearts and The Emotional Lives of Animals
