David Bard-Schwarz : An Introduction to Electronic Art Through the Teaching of Jacques Lacan: Strangest Thing before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised An Introduction to Electronic Art Through the Teaching of Jacques Lacan: Strangest Thing:

Electronic art offers endless opportunities for reflection and interpretation. Works can be interactive or entirely autonomous and the viewer's perception and reaction to them may be challenged by constantly transforming images. Whether the transformations are a product of the appearances or actions of a viewer in an installation space, or a product of a self-contained computer program, is a source of constant fascination. Some viewers may feel strange or unnerved by a work, while others may feel welcoming, humorous, and playful emotions. The art may also provoke a critical response to social, aesthetic, and political aspects of early twenty-first-century life. This book approaches electronic art through the teachings of Jacques Lacan, whose return to Freud has exerted a powerful and wide-ranging influence on psychoanalysis and critical theory in the twentieth century. David Bard-Schwarz draws on his experience with Lacanian psychoanalysis, music, and interactive and traditional arts in order to address aspects of the works the viewer may find difficult to understand. Dividing his approach over four thematic chapters—Bodies, Voices, Eyes, and Signifiers—Bard-Schwarz explores the links between works of new media and psychoanalysis (how we process what we see, hear, touch, imagine, and remember). This is a fascinating book for new media artists and critics, museum curators, psychologists, students in the fine arts, and those who are interested in digital technology and contemporary culture.

"This extraordinary path-breaking book shows how the signifying materials Lacan produced illuminate some of the strangest things we find in electronic art. We first think we cannot believe our eyes or trust what we think we hear, and this exploration embodies the old message that in psychoanalysis only exaggeration is true. Bard-Schwarz makes it alive and new for us here." Ian Parker, Visiting Professor, Birkbeck, University of London, Psychoanalyst, Manchester
