Here is some of the interesting information that this book mentions: Arcata can make claim to establishing the first church in Humboldt County and the first railroad of the State of California. Methodist minister Asa White established the first church in Humboldt County in 1850. He defended the equality of everybody, regardless of ethnicity. Arcata has historically been home to diverse ethnic enclaves. The Arcata Drug Store on H Street was the site of a primitive electric plant that provided the city residents with their first electric lights. Some of the pictures in the book include pictures of the following: Bret Harte, Noah Falk, Arcata Grammar School, Arcata High School and students there, Thomas Blair, Arcata Motel, and The First National Bank of Arcata.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Digging Photos Out Of The BoxBy Kenneth F. FarnsworthSo glad to see photos out of the archival boxes and into print. Text gives adequate context to illustrations. Organization by theme is appropriate, although "change through time" series regarding the Plaza would have been better. An excellent book for homesick HSU grads.

Arcata, a bright jewel surrounded by the redwood forested hills of northern Humboldt Bay, was once the territory of the Wiyot Indians. The tribe only barely survived massacres and relocation after a town was founded there in 1850, a supply point for gold seekers at nearby mines. That town soon evolved into a center for a thriving lumber industry that fed sawmills and a barrel factory, and dairies that prospered on the pastoral Arcata Bottom. Home to Humboldt State University and the much loved Humboldt Crabs baseball team, Arcata is attracting new businesses, industries, and national attention for its innovative Arcata Marsh public works project.

About the AuthorJessie Faulkner serves as public relations manager for the Humboldt County Historical Society and is also a history columnist for the Times Standard newspaper and the Humboldt Historian.
