Kathleen Pyne : Art and the Higher Life: Painting and Evolutionary Thought in Late Nineteenth-Century America before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Art and the Higher Life: Painting and Evolutionary Thought in Late Nineteenth-Century America:

Late in the nineteenth century, many Americans were troubled by the theories of Charles Darwin, which contradicted both traditional Christian teachings and the idea of human supremacy over nature, and by an influx of foreign immigrants, who challenged the supremacy of the old Anglo-Saxon elite. In response, many people drew comfort from the theories of philosopher Herbert Spencer, who held that human society inevitably develops towards higher and more spiritual forms. In this illuminating study, Kathleen Pyne explores how Spencer's theories influenced a generation of American artists. She shows how the painters of the 1880s and 1890s, particularly John La Farge, James McNeill Whistler, Thomas Dewing and the Boston school, and the impressionist painters of the Ten, developed an art dedicated to social refinement and spiritual ideals and to defending the Anglo-Saxon elite of which they were members. This linking of visual culture to the problematic conditions of American life radically reinterprets the most important trends in late nineteenth-century American painting.

"[Pyne's] book deserves considerable notice not only from historians of American art but from a wide array of literary and cultural historians." (The New England Quarterly) About the Author Kathleen Pyne is Professor of Art at the University of Notre Dame.
