Delivery was fast, and I didn't experience any issues. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Great book about Bay City Michigan By Jim Excellent book, easy to read and perfect for the history buff. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Good postcards By MFCook nice book. nice pictures. nice commentary. nice sense of the town i was raised i'd like more narrative. more sense of what bay city was and how it's change.

In 1831, Alexis de Tocqueville described the Saginaw Valley as the "far west" of our growing nation, predicting that its impenetrable forests would soon be felled, and its river would be lined with quays and filled with vessels.

Influential settlers soon began to confirm those predictions, including the Trombleys, who arrived in 1831 and built the Trombley House in 1837. Albert Miller platted Portsmouth in 1836 and Lower Saginaw, now known as Bay City, was platted the same year. Throughout the 20th century, majestic buildings were erected, schools, homes, and churches were established, and Bay City developed into a wonderful place to live, work, and raise a family.

About the Author Leon Katzinger has been married for 34 years, with two grown sons. He has collected Bay City postcards for more than 30 years. With his collection and cards from several friends, he helps recreate a bygone era. He is the principal of Auburn Elementary School and a past president of the Bay County Historical Society.
